Mobilizing Against Kleptocracy: Lessons from Collective Action Movements

Tuesday, May 21, 2024 12:00 PM EDT

Register to Attend

CEPPS partners IFES, CIPE, D-ARCH and Internews, as well as representatives from UPENN's DevLab and the Brookings Institution, will present two new research projects being launched under DEPP. The first is a Technical Leadership project titled "Mixed-Methods Approach to Distinguishing Genuine from Self-Serving Anticorruption Campaigns," and the second is a Pilot Project titled "Effective Approaches to Building Multi-Stakeholder Action Against Transnational Corruption in Elections".

Presenters

Eguiar Lizundia

Senior Advisor for Governance and Anti-Corruption, IRI

Eguiar is a Senior Advisor for Governance and Anti-Corruption at the International Republican Institute's Center for Global Impact. Prior to IRI, Eguiar helped design, implement and evaluate public sector management reform projects in Latin America and Africa at the World Bank. He recently served as the editor of The Kleptocrat's Playbook and writes regularly on governance and anti-corruption topics.

Frank Brown

Director of the Anti-Corruption & Governance Center, CIPE

Frank is the Director of the Anti-Corruption & Governance Center at the Center for International Private Enterprise. He developed its Anti-Corruption Rapid Response program - which swiftly deploys resources to support civil society activists in countries that are experiencing unique opportunities for reform; and its Integrated Compliance program – which takes a holistic approach to corporate compliance by examining how labor and environmental standards can be upheld in tandem with anti-corruption requirements.

This event will be moderated by NDI's Ramsey Rodriguez Vergara and will feature a discussion with IFES's Richard Nash and NDI's Kristen Sample.
